ROBERT M'CORMICK, TRIBUNE HEAD, NAMED IN BIG DAMAGE SUIT

Publisher and Nick Hunt, Former Police Official, Hit by $50,000 Damage Suit—Bill Recalls Suit of Edward S. Adams—Former Chauffeur Makes Serious Charges.

Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, has been named in a suit for $50,000 filed in the Superior Court. The suit is an aftermath of the $300,000 trespass suit, the praecipe for which was filed against the head of the Tribune by Edward S. Adams, former member of the Board of Trade.

The present suit was filed by Haight, Brown & Haight, attorneys for Frank Pizza, former chauffeur for McCormick. The bill also names Nick Hunt, former police inspector and now head of a private detective agency; Louis E. Fitzgerald, also a private detective, and Michael Mills, a police officer attached to the first deputy's office.

Pizza charges that he was arrested and imprisoned while Hunt grilled him and threatened him with criminal prosecution "unless he would give information and make a statement concerning the claim of the said Adams against the defendant, Robert R. McCormick, and unless the plaintiff
